

Strategic Plan 2014-2018

BRITISH COLUMBIA ARTS COUNCIL
An agency of the Province of British Columbia

INTRODUCTION

The BC Arts Council is pleased to present its Strategic Plan: 2014-2018. This plan will serve to guide the Council's development of policy and program priorities as it strives to support the creative and innovative capacity of the arts and cultural community and represent the interests of the creative sector.

Arts and culture are integral in British Columbia, contributing significantly to culturally-rich communities with sustainable jobs, economic growth, and vibrant social fabrics. The impact of the creative sector on individuals, communities and the province is immeasurable. The Council is firmly committed to supporting the artistic excellence of British Columbia's talented artists and important arts and cultural organizations, that:

- Encourage participation in artistic and creative activity;
- Improve quality of life and social cohesion;
- Develop, attract and retain skilled and innovative thinkers for the creative sector;
- Foster community identity and a sense of place; and
- Contribute to local, regional and provincial economies.

The BC Arts Council has the opportunity to support artists and arts and culture organizations as they remain flexible and adaptive while responding to economic constraints, rapidly developing technology, and shifting demographics.

The global economic environment remains fragile, and although well-positioned, British Columbia is not immune to the economic challenges this presents. Despite the prolonged economic downturn, in 2013-2014 the government of British Columbia provided the Council with $24 million, the largest annual grants budget in the Council's history. This significant new investment enhances the Council's capacity to support the arts and culture sector, provides opportunities to review funding levels for core programs, and allows the exploration of new initiatives, such as programs that enhance youth engagement in the arts and build capacity and resilience in the sector.

In addition to the prolonged economic downturn, the continuous and rapid evolution of new technologies is a constant reality presenting both new challenges and new opportunities. These changes have the potential to affect all aspects of artistic practice and management, from new approaches to creation and presentation to transformed business models.

Communities in British Columbia are also shifting at a rapid pace and arts and culture organizations are adapting to changing demographics and audiences to remain relevant. Audiences are becoming increasingly diverse, and artists and organizations are adjusting to embrace a wider range of cultural perspectives, art forms and generations while continuing to promote collaboration across disciplines and practices.

In the face of all this change, now is the time to put a stronger emphasis on the next generation of creative, collaborative and innovative artists and citizens. In January, 2013, the government announced BC Creative Futures, a comprehensive strategy to promote youth engagement with the arts and to help prepare young British Columbians for rewarding careers in the creative sector. Creative Futures relies upon the talents and expertise of British Columbia's arts and culture community to mentor, nurture and inspire the next generation.

Although much has changed since the previous plan was written, the Council holds firm to the goals it set out as aspirations for the coming years. These goals and strategies will help position the BC Arts Council to continue to advocate on behalf of the arts and culture community and to support artists and organizations as they increase their resiliency, dynamism and flexibility.

STRATEGIC PLAN CONSULTATION

The 2014-2018 plan was developed by the BC Arts Council Board in consultation with its stakeholders through:

- An online survey with more than 500 respondents reflecting a cross-section of disciplines, community interests, age groups and experience in the arts;
- Facilitated sessions with Advisory Committee members;
- Consultation with BC Arts Council staff; and
- Consideration of strategic plans from other provincial arts funders and the Canada Council for the Arts.

The 2013 survey results, coupled with some important shifts affecting arts and culture, clearly called for changes to be adopted in the 2014-2018 strategic plan of the Council. Through the process of revising the strategic plan, the Council has incorporated many of the excellent suggestions from stakeholders. As a result of the feedback, this plan aims to clarify the previously stated goals and create more focused strategies to achieve them.

The Council recognizes the opportunity to respond to the sector's challenges and aims to help facilitate the shift to a culture of adaptability and collaboration. Overall, the objective is to ensure that the sector remains relevant, resilient and sustainable in this changing environment while maintaining excellence in artistic achievement and strong community engagement.
